

June 2008

Greetings from the National Board of the Leadership Program for Musicians,

LPM is evolving to meet changing needs, and you are the most important link in the life of LPM. The input we have received these past two years during coordinator and recertification trainings as well as from calls and e-mails have been invaluable. It is together that LPM works best – local programs and National LPM Board. We are here for you!

The board values and supports the original vision of LPM: that our curriculum is at its best when it is taught by certified coordinators and faculty in a relational environment - teachers and students, and students to students. Local programs have been the hallmark of LPM over its 15 years with some 538 graduates to date, and will continue to be so.

The curriculum was posted on the LeaderResources website (www.leaderresources.org/lpm) for online delivery in 2007. As so many of you have informed us, this delivery system is working well. We hope to continue hearing from all of you on your LPM experiences and the LeaderResources curriculum access.

To financially support this delivery system and the other on-going LPM needs (curriculum updates, additional teaching materials, coordinator and recertification training, “On the Road” workshops, scholarship assistance, etc.), the board requested that local LPM programs share in this work that benefits them by returning to LPM a goal of 20% of tuition income they receive. This request has been circulated over the past 2 ½ years, but has not prompted the financial support hoped for.

LPM has been financially supported throughout its history, in part, by the denominations it services. The Evangelical Lutheran Church in America and Episcopal Church USA are the major source of funding for the National LPM Board; more recently, the Presbyterian Association of Musicians and United Church of Christ Musicians Association have also contributed. Times are changing. The income received by national church denominations from local dioceses and synods has been reduced, and the denominations, in turn, have reduced funding to the programs they support. We still receive some funding from all four partner denominations but with denominational changes we have been advised not to rely on this support forever. So the National LPM Board needs to be a faithful steward of the resources given to us and find alternate means of funding to help insure LPM’s survival and relevance for future generations of church musicians.

To cut expenses and commit a majority of our funds to local programs, the board has committed themselves to doing its business with only one face-to-face meeting per year (instead of two) and conduct our business for the rest of the year via conference calls and e-mails. In addition, working hours for the Consultant-Coordinator have been reduced. As always, the budget for the National LPM Board's work is available to anyone for review.

Our curriculum has always been our greatest asset. Any organization that hopes to be an effective force for ministry in the church must use its assets effectively. So, beginning immediately, access to the online curriculum through LeaderResources will be available on a fee basis: $100 per year, per course for currently certified LPM coordinators; $195 per year, per course for coordinators with expired training; $495 per year, per course for others. You pay your fee at the LeaderResources website and they issue a password.

At $100/per course, the cost for each of the ten sessions in each course is only $10, which divided among the number of participants is indeed an insignificant cost.

While the Board struggled to balance local needs with financial viability, we realize that these changes present local coordinators with additional challenges. To assist active local LPM programs transitioning to this new system, rebates are being offered in the amount of $25 per course when purchases through the LeaderResources website. This brings the price per course down to $75/each. Contact Anna Leppert-Largent for a rebate coupon to use when making purchases at the LeaderResources website.

The National LPM Board seeks to address your concerns with timely attention and proactive suggestions. As we continue the exciting and exhaustive process of making this curriculum the best it can be in delivery style and scope of content, we seek your energy as well. The Consultant-Coordinator or any member of the Board can be reached via the Contact Page on the LPM website (www.lpm-online.org).

Thank you in advance for your partnership.

In Christ,

John Marsh, Chair
For the National LPM Board

June 2008

Greetings from the National Board of the Leadership Program for Musicians,

LPM is evolving to meet changing needs, and you are the most important link in the life of LPM. The input we have received these past two years during coordinator and recertification trainings as well as from calls and e-mails have been invaluable. It is together that LPM works best – local programs and National LPM Board. We are here for you!

The board values and supports the original vision of LPM: that our curriculum is at its best when it is taught by certified coordinators and faculty in a relational environment - teachers and students, and students to students. Local programs have been the hallmark of LPM over its 15 years with some 538 graduates to date, and will continue to be so.

The curriculum was posted on the LeaderResources website (www.leaderresources.org/lpm) for online delivery in 2007. As so many of you have informed us, this delivery system is working well. We hope to continue hearing from all of you on your LPM experiences and the LeaderResources curriculum access.

To financially support this delivery system and the other on-going LPM needs (curriculum updates, additional teaching materials, coordinator and recertification training, “On the Road” workshops, scholarship assistance, etc.), the board requested that local LPM programs share in this work that benefits them by returning to LPM a goal of 20% of tuition income they receive. This request has been circulated over the past 2 ½ years, but has not prompted the financial support hoped for.

LPM has been financially supported throughout its history, in part, by the denominations it services. The Evangelical Lutheran Church in America and Episcopal Church USA are the major source of funding for the National LPM Board; more recently, the Presbyterian Association of Musicians and United Church of Christ Musicians Association have also contributed. Times are changing. The income received by national church denominations from local dioceses and synods has been reduced, and the denominations, in turn, have reduced funding to the programs they support. We still receive some funding from all four partner denominations but with denominational changes we have been advised not to rely on this support forever. So the National LPM Board needs to be a faithful steward of the resources given to us and find alternate means of funding to help insure LPM’s survival and relevance for future generations of church musicians.

To cut expenses and commit a majority of our funds to local programs, the board has committed themselves to doing its business with only one face-to-face meeting per year (instead of two) and conduct our business for the rest of the year via conference calls and e-mails. In addition, working hours for the Consultant-Coordinator have been reduced. As always, the budget for the National LPM Board's work is available to anyone for review.

Our curriculum has always been our greatest asset. Any organization that hopes to be an effective force for ministry in the church must use its assets effectively. So, beginning immediately, access to the online curriculum through LeaderResources will be available on a fee basis: $100 per year, per course for currently certified LPM coordinators; $195 per year, per course for coordinators with expired training; $495 per year, per course for others. You pay your fee at the LeaderResources website and they issue a password.

At $100/per course, the cost for each of the ten sessions in each course is only $10, which divided among the number of participants is indeed an insignificant cost.

While the Board struggled to balance local needs with financial viability, we realize that these changes present local coordinators with additional challenges. To assist active local LPM programs transitioning to this new system, rebates are being offered in the amount of $25 per course when purchases through the LeaderResources website. This brings the price per course down to $75/each. Contact Anna Leppert-Largent for a rebate coupon to use when making purchases at the LeaderResources website.

The National LPM Board seeks to address your concerns with timely attention and proactive suggestions. As we continue the exciting and exhaustive process of making this curriculum the best it can be in delivery style and scope of content, we seek your energy as well. The Consultant-Coordinator or any member of the Board can be reached via the Contact Page on the LPM website (www.lpm-online.org).

Thank you in advance for your partnership.

In Christ,

John Marsh, Chair
For the National LPM Board

June 2008

Greetings from the National Board of the Leadership Program for Musicians,

LPM is evolving to meet changing needs, and you are the most important link in the life of LPM. The input we have received these past two years during coordinator and recertification trainings as well as from calls and e-mails have been invaluable. It is together that LPM works best – local programs and National LPM Board. We are here for you!

The board values and supports the original vision of LPM: that our curriculum is at its best when it is taught by certified coordinators and faculty in a relational environment - teachers and students, and students to students. Local programs have been the hallmark of LPM over its 15 years with some 538 graduates to date, and will continue to be so.

The curriculum was posted on the LeaderResources website (www.leaderresources.org/lpm) for online delivery in 2007. As so many of you have informed us, this delivery system is working well. We hope to continue hearing from all of you on your LPM experiences and the LeaderResources curriculum access.

To financially support this delivery system and the other on-going LPM needs (curriculum updates, additional teaching materials, coordinator and recertification training, “On the Road” workshops, scholarship assistance, etc.), the board requested that local LPM programs share in this work that benefits them by returning to LPM a goal of 20% of tuition income they receive. This request has been circulated over the past 2 ½ years, but has not prompted the financial support hoped for.

LPM has been financially supported throughout its history, in part, by the denominations it services. The Evangelical Lutheran Church in America and Episcopal Church USA are the major source of funding for the National LPM Board; more recently, the Presbyterian Association of Musicians and United Church of Christ Musicians Association have also contributed. Times are changing. The income received by national church denominations from local dioceses and synods has been reduced, and the denominations, in turn, have reduced funding to the programs they support. We still receive some funding from all four partner denominations but with denominational changes we have been advised not to rely on this support forever. So the National LPM Board needs to be a faithful steward of the resources given to us and find alternate means of funding to help insure LPM’s survival and relevance for future generations of church musicians.

To cut expenses and commit a majority of our funds to local programs, the board has committed themselves to doing its business with only one face-to-face meeting per year (instead of two) and conduct our business for the rest of the year via conference calls and e-mails. In addition, working hours for the Consultant-Coordinator have been reduced. As always, the budget for the National LPM Board's work is available to anyone for review.

Our curriculum has always been our greatest asset. Any organization that hopes to be an effective force for ministry in the church must use its assets effectively. So, beginning immediately, access to the online curriculum through LeaderResources will be available on a fee basis: $100 per year, per course for currently certified LPM coordinators; $195 per year, per course for coordinators with expired training; $495 per year, per course for others. You pay your fee at the LeaderResources website and they issue a password.

At $100/per course, the cost for each of the ten sessions in each course is only $10, which divided among the number of participants is indeed an insignificant cost.

While the Board struggled to balance local needs with financial viability, we realize that these changes present local coordinators with additional challenges. To assist active local LPM programs transitioning to this new system, rebates are being offered in the amount of $25 per course when purchases through the LeaderResources website. This brings the price per course down to $75/each. Contact Anna Leppert-Largent for a rebate coupon to use when making purchases at the LeaderResources website.

The National LPM Board seeks to address your concerns with timely attention and proactive suggestions. As we continue the exciting and exhaustive process of making this curriculum the best it can be in delivery style and scope of content, we seek your energy as well. The Consultant-Coordinator or any member of the Board can be reached via the Contact Page on the LPM website (www.lpm-online.org).

Thank you in advance for your partnership.

In Christ,

John Marsh, Chair
For the National LPM Board

June 2008

Greetings from the National Board of the Leadership Program for Musicians,

LPM is evolving to meet changing needs, and you are the most important link in the life of LPM. The input we have received these past two years during coordinator and recertification trainings as well as from calls and e-mails have been invaluable. It is together that LPM works best – local programs and National LPM Board. We are here for you!

The board values and supports the original vision of LPM: that our curriculum is at its best when it is taught by certified coordinators and faculty in a relational environment - teachers and students, and students to students. Local programs have been the hallmark of LPM over its 15 years with some 538 graduates to date, and will continue to be so.

The curriculum was posted on the LeaderResources website (www.leaderresources.org/lpm) for online delivery in 2007. As so many of you have informed us, this delivery system is working well. We hope to continue hearing from all of you on your LPM experiences and the LeaderResources curriculum access.

To financially support this delivery system and the other on-going LPM needs (curriculum updates, additional teaching materials, coordinator and recertification training, “On the Road” workshops, scholarship assistance, etc.), the board requested that local LPM programs share in this work that benefits them by returning to LPM a goal of 20% of tuition income they receive. This request has been circulated over the past 2 ½ years, but has not prompted the financial support hoped for.

LPM has been financially supported throughout its history, in part, by the denominations it services. The Evangelical Lutheran Church in America and Episcopal Church USA are the major source of funding for the National LPM Board; more recently, the Presbyterian Association of Musicians and United Church of Christ Musicians Association have also contributed. Times are changing. The income received by national church denominations from local dioceses and synods has been reduced, and the denominations, in turn, have reduced funding to the programs they support. We still receive some funding from all four partner denominations but with denominational changes we have been advised not to rely on this support forever. So the National LPM Board needs to be a faithful steward of the resources given to us and find alternate means of funding to help insure LPM’s survival and relevance for future generations of church musicians.

To cut expenses and commit a majority of our funds to local programs, the board has committed themselves to doing its business with only one face-to-face meeting per year (instead of two) and conduct our business for the rest of the year via conference calls and e-mails. In addition, working hours for the Consultant-Coordinator have been reduced. As always, the budget for the National LPM Board's work is available to anyone for review.

Our curriculum has always been our greatest asset. Any organization that hopes to be an effective force for ministry in the church must use its assets effectively. So, beginning immediately, access to the online curriculum through LeaderResources will be available on a fee basis: $100 per year, per course for currently certified LPM coordinators; $195 per year, per course for coordinators with expired training; $495 per year, per course for others. You pay your fee at the LeaderResources website and they issue a password.

At $100/per course, the cost for each of the ten sessions in each course is only $10, which divided among the number of participants is indeed an insignificant cost.

While the Board struggled to balance local needs with financial viability, we realize that these changes present local coordinators with additional challenges. To assist active local LPM programs transitioning to this new system, rebates are being offered in the amount of $25 per course when purchases through the LeaderResources website. This brings the price per course down to $75/each. Contact Anna Leppert-Largent for a rebate coupon to use when making purchases at the LeaderResources website.

The National LPM Board seeks to address your concerns with timely attention and proactive suggestions. As we continue the exciting and exhaustive process of making this curriculum the best it can be in delivery style and scope of content, we seek your energy as well. The Consultant-Coordinator or any member of the Board can be reached via the Contact Page on the LPM website (www.lpm-online.org).

Thank you in advance for your partnership.

In Christ,

John Marsh, Chair
For the National LPM Board

June 2008

Greetings from the National Board of the Leadership Program for Musicians,

LPM is evolving to meet changing needs, and you are the most important link in the life of LPM. The input we have received these past two years during coordinator and recertification trainings as well as from calls and e-mails have been invaluable. It is together that LPM works best – local programs and National LPM Board. We are here for you!

The board values and supports the original vision of LPM: that our curriculum is at its best when it is taught by certified coordinators and faculty in a relational environment - teachers and students, and students to students. Local programs have been the hallmark of LPM over its 15 years with some 538 graduates to date, and will continue to be so.

The curriculum was posted on the LeaderResources website (www.leaderresources.org/lpm) for online delivery in 2007. As so many of you have informed us, this delivery system is working well. We hope to continue hearing from all of you on your LPM experiences and the LeaderResources curriculum access.

To financially support this delivery system and the other on-going LPM needs (curriculum updates, additional teaching materials, coordinator and recertification training, “On the Road” workshops, scholarship assistance, etc.), the board requested that local LPM programs share in this work that benefits them by returning to LPM a goal of 20% of tuition income they receive. This request has been circulated over the past 2 ½ years, but has not prompted the financial support hoped for.

LPM has been financially supported throughout its history, in part, by the denominations it services. The Evangelical Lutheran Church in America and Episcopal Church USA are the major source of funding for the National LPM Board; more recently, the Presbyterian Association of Musicians and United Church of Christ Musicians Association have also contributed. Times are changing. The income received by national church denominations from local dioceses and synods has been reduced, and the denominations, in turn, have reduced funding to the programs they support. We still receive some funding from all four partner denominations but with denominational changes we have been advised not to rely on this support forever. So the National LPM Board needs to be a faithful steward of the resources given to us and find alternate means of funding to help insure LPM’s survival and relevance for future generations of church musicians.

To cut expenses and commit a majority of our funds to local programs, the board has committed themselves to doing its business with only one face-to-face meeting per year (instead of two) and conduct our business for the rest of the year via conference calls and e-mails. In addition, working hours for the Consultant-Coordinator have been reduced. As always, the budget for the National LPM Board's work is available to anyone for review.

Our curriculum has always been our greatest asset. Any organization that hopes to be an effective force for ministry in the church must use its assets effectively. So, beginning immediately, access to the online curriculum through LeaderResources will be available on a fee basis: $100 per year, per course for currently certified LPM coordinators; $195 per year, per course for coordinators with expired training; $495 per year, per course for others. You pay your fee at the LeaderResources website and they issue a password.

At $100/per course, the cost for each of the ten sessions in each course is only $10, which divided among the number of participants is indeed an insignificant cost.

While the Board struggled to balance local needs with financial viability, we realize that these changes present local coordinators with additional challenges. To assist active local LPM programs transitioning to this new system, rebates are being offered in the amount of $25 per course when purchases through the LeaderResources website. This brings the price per course down to $75/each. Contact Anna Leppert-Largent for a rebate coupon to use when making purchases at the LeaderResources website.

The National LPM Board seeks to address your concerns with timely attention and proactive suggestions. As we continue the exciting and exhaustive process of making this curriculum the best it can be in delivery style and scope of content, we seek your energy as well. The Consultant-Coordinator or any member of the Board can be reached via the Contact Page on the LPM website (www.lpm-online.org).

Thank you in advance for your partnership.

In Christ,

John Marsh, Chair
For the National LPM Board

June 2008

Greetings from the National Board of the Leadership Program for Musicians,

LPM is evolving to meet changing needs, and you are the most important link in the life of LPM. The input we have received these past two years during coordinator and recertification trainings as well as from calls and e-mails have been invaluable. It is together that LPM works best – local programs and National LPM Board. We are here for you!

The board values and supports the original vision of LPM: that our curriculum is at its best when it is taught by certified coordinators and faculty in a relational environment - teachers and students, and students to students. Local programs have been the hallmark of LPM over its 15 years with some 538 graduates to date, and will continue to be so.

The curriculum was posted on the LeaderResources website (www.leaderresources.org/lpm) for online delivery in 2007. As so many of you have informed us, this delivery system is working well. We hope to continue hearing from all of you on your LPM experiences and the LeaderResources curriculum access.

To financially support this delivery system and the other on-going LPM needs (curriculum updates, additional teaching materials, coordinator and recertification training, “On the Road” workshops, scholarship assistance, etc.), the board requested that local LPM programs share in this work that benefits them by returning to LPM a goal of 20% of tuition income they receive. This request has been circulated over the past 2 ½ years, but has not prompted the financial support hoped for.

LPM has been financially supported throughout its history, in part, by the denominations it services. The Evangelical Lutheran Church in America and Episcopal Church USA are the major source of funding for the National LPM Board; more recently, the Presbyterian Association of Musicians and United Church of Christ Musicians Association have also contributed. Times are changing. The income received by national church denominations from local dioceses and synods has been reduced, and the denominations, in turn, have reduced funding to the programs they support. We still receive some funding from all four partner denominations but with denominational changes we have been advised not to rely on this support forever. So the National LPM Board needs to be a faithful steward of the resources given to us and find alternate means of funding to help insure LPM’s survival and relevance for future generations of church musicians.

To cut expenses and commit a majority of our funds to local programs, the board has committed themselves to doing its business with only one face-to-face meeting per year (instead of two) and conduct our business for the rest of the year via conference calls and e-mails. In addition, working hours for the Consultant-Coordinator have been reduced. As always, the budget for the National LPM Board's work is available to anyone for review.

Our curriculum has always been our greatest asset. Any organization that hopes to be an effective force for ministry in the church must use its assets effectively. So, beginning immediately, access to the online curriculum through LeaderResources will be available on a fee basis: $100 per year, per course for currently certified LPM coordinators; $195 per year, per course for coordinators with expired training; $495 per year, per course for others. You pay your fee at the LeaderResources website and they issue a password.

At $100/per course, the cost for each of the ten sessions in each course is only $10, which divided among the number of participants is indeed an insignificant cost.

While the Board struggled to balance local needs with financial viability, we realize that these changes present local coordinators with additional challenges. To assist active local LPM programs transitioning to this new system, rebates are being offered in the amount of $25 per course when purchases through the LeaderResources website. This brings the price per course down to $75/each. Contact Anna Leppert-Largent for a rebate coupon to use when making purchases at the LeaderResources website.

The National LPM Board seeks to address your concerns with timely attention and proactive suggestions. As we continue the exciting and exhaustive process of making this curriculum the best it can be in delivery style and scope of content, we seek your energy as well. The Consultant-Coordinator or any member of the Board can be reached via the Contact Page on the LPM website (www.lpm-online.org).

Thank you in advance for your partnership.

In Christ,

John Marsh, Chair
For the National LPM Board